In 2010, the makers of "Sanju", a Bollywood film starring Ranbir Kapoor, Sonam Kapoor, and Ranveer Singh, caused controversy when they uploaded their film onto torrent sites for free before its official release date. The movie was made under UTV Motion Pictures banner and distributed by Eros International. It was also made in association with Reliance Entertainment. Sanjay Dutt, who is yet to be released from Yerwada Jail, has been sentenced 6 months of jail time in connection with the 1993 Mumbai blasts case. This decision was made by the High Court of Bombay on 23 February 2013. However, he has been granted bail for this sentence until his appeal is heard.

The producers of "Gangs Of Wasseypur", an upcoming Bollywood film starring Manoj Bajpayee, Nawazuddin Siddiqui, Huma Qureshi and Richa Chadda, decided to distribute their movie online for free in direct download form and link on Facebook and Twitter after a dispute with PVR Cinemas and Airtel Digital TV over digital rights. The film was scheduled to be released on 8 June 2012, but after the dispute over digital rights, PVR Cinemas decided not to screen the movie in its cinemas. Anurag Kashyap then decided to release it online for free. He took the decision not only to release it online for free but also because he wanted people to see his movie in cinemas. According to him, this was the only way people would pay to see it. Anurag Kashyap has stated that he is hurt by PVR Cinemas' step of banning his film and added that if they think his film is so bad, they should at least let other audiences watch it in their cinemas. He has stated that he will release his movie online, on Facebook and Twitter on 8 June 2012. He also added that the decision of releasing the film online wasn't a difficult one for him to make since he had a small budget of just USD$7 million. He said that he is not against those who have raised concerns over the movie but was upset with those who tried to make money from his film. He also added that he wanted people to see this movie in cinemas as only then would they pay to watch it.
